Student Conduct and Academic Integrity: Discipline Process

For Students

The discipline process begins only if the Title IX investigation has met the preponderance standard that more likely than not a violation occurred.

ADMINISTRATIVE DISPOSITION

Student Conduct meets with the complainant and respondent separately to present findings of policy violations and proposed sanctions.

- If both parties agree with the findings presented in the administrative disposition, the case is resolved.
- If either or both parties disagree with either the findings or the proposed sanctions, he or she can request a hearing.

APPEAL

If both parties agree with the findings, but do not agree with the proposed sanctions, he or she can appeal the sanctions to the Office of the President or designee.

HEARING

Student Conduct, Complainant, and Respondent have the opportunity to present their case to the hearing officer, including relevant evidence and witness testimony.

Following the hearing, the hearing officer will render a decision about the findings of the case and proposed sanctions, if applicable.

- If all parties agree with the hearing officer's decision, the case is resolved.
- If one or all parties disagree with the hearing decision, any participant can appeal the decision to the Office of the President.

APPEAL

The Office of the President will review all documents related to the case and render a FINAL decision.

For more information about the discipline process, visit http://deanofstudents.utexas.edu/conduct/